

Open Research Training Survey

The aim of this survey is to gather the views of medical and life researchers on training in open research practices. Your responses to the survey will inform the design of open research training. You are encouraged to take part whether or not you are aware of open research practices, and whether or not you deem them relevant or necessary for your field of research. Your participation will help to ensure that the training provided is appropriate for your discipline.

Broadly, open research (also called 'open scholarship' or, in some disciplines, 'open science') refers to efforts to ensure that different elements of the research process are robust, transparent, and accessible.

The survey is administered by the UK Reproducibility Network (UKRN). It is aimed at researchers in any role and at any career stage (including academics, research staff and fellows, research support staff, and postgraduate research students), working in any field of research within MRC-funded organisations, as well as researchers in the Health and Life Sciences departments of the University of Bristol.

Survey procedure and data protection

Participation in the survey is voluntary. The survey comprises short questions on 6 open research topics, and we estimate that it will take under 10 minutes to complete. You can complete part of the survey and resume it on this device, using the same browser, within seven days. The survey will be active until April 2021.

You can choose to exit the survey at any time. Additionally, you can explicitly request to withdraw your responses while the survey is active, whether you have completed it in full or only in part. The respondent ID in the footer at the very bottom of the page is provided for this purpose.

All responses will be anonymous and non-identifiable information will be shared openly in appropriate repositories.

Contact

If you have any comments or questions, please contact the UKRN Coordinator for Open Research Training, Matt Jaquiere (matt.jaquiere@psy.ox.ac.uk).

I consent to participating in the survey and to processing of the information I provide as outlined above.
